Objectives: The primary objective of this event is to prepare students for the industry by ensuring their project ideas are robust, innovative, and feasible. By presenting their project ideas to a review panel, students will demonstrate the merit and viability of their proposals.

Description: In line with IIC guidelines, the Information Technology department conducted a project idea selection process. Each student group presented three distinct project ideas to a panel of internal and external reviewers. The goal of these presentations was to highlight the innovation, feasibility, and relevance of each proposed idea. The panel's role was to critically assess these ideas and select the most promising and innovative one for each group. This rigorous selection process ensures that only the most impactful and practical projects, which align with academic standards and industry needs while considering societal and environmental impacts, are pursued.

The list of selected project ideas has been updated on the department's website for the academic year 2024-25.
